

Ok, gotta get this '87 POS '44 started...

Posted by coolrideraz - 23 Oct 2009 11:36

Any Tucson(preferably) or Phoenix parts dealers or shops wanna help me build this thing into a Spec '44 racer? (SCCA and NASA)

Re:Ok, gotta get this '87 POS '44 started...

Posted by JRichard - 25 Oct 2009 01:48

Welcome, a few questions/suggestions...

What do you have and what state is it in? How much work and how much work are you planning to do on your own? How much track time do you have do you plan or are you jumping right in?

You can get on track fairly easily with the basic safety mods, cage ,harnesses, FE, battery disc, after that it's all a state of tune and competitive level...that's all a personal thing. You'll see cars at all different levels or in different states of development...

Re:Ok, gotta get this '87 POS '44 started...

Posted by joepaluch - 30 Oct 2009 06:48

Not many shops on this board. Most Az guys do a lot themselves, but farm out the bigger jobs. So simple stuff like stripping the car as a backyard job. Engine rebuilds can be a shop thing. Jim Flucky at German Auto in Phoenix has been doing a lot of good work on these cars.

Some of us a just DIY the entire thing. I am one of those guys.

So how much work do you need done?
