

Ready to Join You Guys

Posted by Salanis42 - 10 Dec 2009 12:32

Well, I have a buyer for the BMW and it will be gone this Saturday. That'll be enough for a Chevy Astro and a 944 Spec car. For my birthday, my grandparents are sending me to a Skip Barber school, which ought to get me my license. So, I'm beginning my race car hunting in earnest.

Wondering if you have any suggestions on what I should be looking for. Just on this forum, these two cars have caught my eye as good options, and wanted to see what you all suggest:

944spec.org/944SPEC/component/option,com...ew/id,5695/catid,21/

944spec.org/944SPEC/component/option,com...ew/id,6130/catid,21/

Thanks again for your support. I'm looking forward to hanging with you all more when the race season starts up!

-Cameron

=====

Re:Ready to Join You Guys

Posted by rlofgren - 10 Dec 2009 12:49

If you are large like i am, one thing you have to think about when buying a race car is will you fit with the cage the way it is. Otherwise, both of these cars look good to me, the price is right. Where are you located, i assume Norcal since this is the forum you posted to?

=====

Re:Ready to Join You Guys

Posted by Salanis42 - 10 Dec 2009 13:44

I'm located in Sacramento. I'm young and fairly thin and flexible (I like to rock climb). I shouldn't have any problems fitting.

=====

Re:Ready to Join You Guys

Posted by Weston - 11 Dec 2009 06:58

Chris' blue #2 car could be a good fit for you then... He's a medium sized guy and it fits him well. I'm 6' 200lbs and it's a little on the tight side for me.

=====

Re:Ready to Join You Guys

Posted by Salanis42 - 11 Dec 2009 10:35

Yeah, I asked him about it, and that's what I gathered.

I don't suppose you guys have thoughts on which of those two cars would be the better deal. I'm leaning towards Chris's. New clutch, nice seat/harness, and 924s all sound really good.

=====

Re:Ready to Join You Guys

Posted by norman#99 - 11 Dec 2009 22:58

Hi Cameron,

Go with Chris's, the other one sold. Welcome to the club. You have some of the best guys in spec in NoCal.

Chris,

I hope you will still be around, you would really be missed!

Happy Holidays everybody

=====